DEFINITIONS

- 7.1 All forms of discrimination, harassment, bullying and victimisation are unacceptable. Unlawful discrimination can take the following forms:

Direct discrimination.

This occurs when a person directly discriminates against another person because of a protected characteristic, where they treat them less favourably than they treat or would treat others. It is direct discrimination when the person who engages in less favourable treatment is influenced at least in part (consciously or subconsciously), by the protected characteristic (for example, a person's sex, race or disability).

Direct discrimination by association.

Occurs when someone is treated less favourably directly because a protected characteristic of someone they are associated with, such as a friend, family member or colleague.

Direct discrimination by perception.

Occurs when someone is treated less favourably directly because a protected characteristic they are thought to have, regardless of whether this perception by others is actually correct or not.

Indirect discrimination.

This type of discrimination can be less obvious than direct discrimination. Indirect discrimination occurs where a provision, criterion or practice is applied equally to a group of individuals but has (or will have) the effect of putting those who share a certain protected characteristic at a particular disadvantage when compared to others in the group and it is unable to be justified.

Bullying.

There are many definitions of bullying and harassment. It may be characterised as unwelcome, offensive, intimidating, malicious or insulting behaviour, an abuse or misuse of power through means that undermine, humiliate, denigrate or injure the recipient. Bullying may be treatment by one individual or groups which may be persistent or an isolated incident.

There can be circumstances when an individual might experience conduct amounting to both bullying and harassment, with the bullying part of the behaviour not related to a protected characteristic.

Harassment.

Is unwanted conduct with the purpose or effect of violating a person's dignity or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for that individual. Harassment has a legal definition under the Equality Act 2010 when this unwanted conduct is related to a relevant protected characteristic. Harassment can take many forms. For example, abusive language, name calling, offensive screen savers, jokes, offensive emails, texts, cruel or offensive postings on social media sites. It can also include spoken or written words. The conduct is unwanted in the sense of unwelcomed or uninvited, even if the victim has not expressly communicated to the harasser that they object to the behaviour. A serious one-off incident, for example forwarding a pornographic email, can be classed as harassment.

Victimisation.

Victimisation has a specific meaning under the Equality Act 2010. It is subjecting someone to less favourable treatment because they have made a complaint of discrimination, lodged a grievance, supporting a colleagues' grievance or bringing a tribunal claim alleging discrimination or harassment.

Victimisation may also occur because an individual is suspected of doing one or more of these things. An employee is protected under the Equality Act if they make or support an allegation of victimisation in good faith, even if the information or evidence they give proves to be inaccurate.

Examples of victimising behaviour could include being:

- Bullied or belittled;
- Ostracised or excluded, having tasks removed;
- Denied promotion;
- Denied bonuses paid to comparable colleagues; or
- Given a poor reference

7.2 Other definitions:

Belonging the feeling of security and support when there is a sense of acceptance, inclusion, and identity for a member of a certain group or place. In order for people to feel like they belong, the environment (in this case the workplace or netball more broadly) needs to be set up to be a diverse and inclusive place.

Diversity psychological, physical, and social differences that occur among any and all individuals; including but not limited to race, ethnicity, nationality, religion, socioeconomic status, education, marital status, language, age, gender, sexual orientation, mental or physical ability, and learning styles. A diverse group, community, or organization is one in which a variety of social and cultural characteristics exist.

Employee where the policy references 'employee', it is also applicable to a worker but for avoidance of doubt, a worker does not have a contract of employment or the same employment rights as an employee.

Equality evenly distributed access to resources and opportunity necessary for a safe and healthy life and to ensure fairness.

Inclusion the act of creating environments in which any individual or group can be and feel welcomed, respected, supported, and valued to fully participate. An inclusive and welcoming climate embraces differences and offers respect in words and actions for all people.
